Program Overview

The Center for Educational Innovation-Public Education Association in partnership with 10 New York City public charter schools will develop the Partnership for Innovation in Compensation for Charter Schools (PICCS) to retain, develop, and reward educators. Public charters generally face critical educator turnover levels. Further, all 10 of these charters serve high-need students who are at risk because of poverty or learning disabilities. The PICCS schools are led by experienced and talented educators who support the Teacher Incentive Fund (TIF) program and goals. The PICCS will potentially affect 280 teachers, 70 teacher's aides, 17 school leaders, and 4,233 students.
